Discussion 1.1: What is Computer Engineering?

As the world evolves fast technology is doing the same. Ever since i was a kid i was always fascinated by how computers work. This fascination leads me to take this specific course which is computer engineering. I always like watching my father repair some of our broken appliances as well as how i like exploring the computer in our local com shop. I think that is the reason why i chose this course, because of its versatility and it blends both software and hardware. I hope that eventually it will allow me to design, build, and integrate both hardware and software components effectively.

Someday, when i finish school the track that id like to work on is networking, cybersecurity, and also software development. This tracks interests me because i know that it will provide me a wide range of skills.
